Executive Office for Immigration Review Announces Six New Assistant Chief Immigration Judges

FALLS CHURCH, Va. – The Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR) today announced the appointment of six new assistant chief immigration judges (ACIJJs). ACIJJs are responsible for overseeing the operations of the immigration courts or program portfolio to which they are assigned. Their official assignments will be announced in the coming months.

The new ACIJJs will help EOIR focus supervisory functions closer to the immigration courts around the country, which is particularly important given the growth in the immigration judge corps expected over the coming months. “While the immigration courts continue to face incredible strain on their resources under an ever growing backlog of cases, we must take action to fully exercise the abilities of our staff at all levels,” said Acting Chief Immigration Judge Print Maggard. “The placement of each of these dedicated immigration judges into a management role will allow EOIR to increase immigration court efficiencies through organizational change.” In addition to their management responsibilities, the new ACIJJs will continue to hear cases.

Biographical information for each ACIJ follows.

- EOIR -

The Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR) is an agency within the Department of Justice. Under delegated authority from the Attorney General, immigration judges and the Board of Immigration Appeals interpret and adjudicate immigration cases according to United States immigration laws. EOIR's immigration judges conduct administrative court proceedings in immigration courts located throughout the nation. They determine whether foreign-born individuals—whom the Department of Homeland Security charges with violating immigration law—should be ordered removed from the United States or should be granted relief from removal and be permitted to remain in this country. The Board of Immigration Appeals primarily reviews appeals of decisions by immigration judges. EOIR's Office of the Chief Administrative Hearing Officer adjudicates immigration-related employment cases. EOIR is committed to ensuring fairness in all of the cases it adjudicates.
